This week is Male Cancer Awareness week: Each year, the national charity Orchid dedicates a week to raise awareness of male-specific cancers for men and their families. Orchid hopes that through the promotion of its services and resources, men and their families will gain a better understanding of where to go for help and treatment. This will be vital in addressing the growing annual increase in male cancer incidence in the UK, including prostate cancer, which is the most common of cancers affecting men. More information about this week can be found on the charity's website - <https://orchid-cancer.org.uk/> If you have any concerns relating to these matters, you can contact me on 07496 439 090
